Hometown Heroes

PRESENTED BY

Hometown Heroes is a weekly radio show honoring the men and women whose service and sacrifice have secured our freedom. Featuring interviews with veterans, primarily from the World War II generation, Hometown Heroes presents history through the perspectives of those who lived it.

The program began on one station – KMJ in Fresno, CA – in 2007, and began syndication to other radio markets in 2013. Host Paul Loeffler travels the country as a sportscaster, employing the downtime on those assignments to connect with veterans from coast to coast. His experience has left him convinced of something you'll hear him say frequently on the program:

"No matter where you're from in this great country of ours, no matter how big, or how small your hometown might be, there are heroes around you."

From Hometown Heroes website: http://www.hometownheroesradio.com/

California County Educational Technology Consortium has been given permission by the producer of Hometown Heroes, Paul Loeffler, to include all of the interviews into CaliforniaStreaming.org so that teachers and students can access them more easily.

A Clovis Unified high school student earned her Gold Award with the Girl Scouts by creating the metadata for 250 episodes to be included in CaliforniaStreaming.org.
